A short reflection on today's Gospel: *Mark 3:20-35

A Kingdom divided against itself cannot stand.

In today's Gospel we witness Jesus' relatives' attempt to 'save him from himself' because they believe that he has 'gone mad'! They understand neither his words nor his actions; they have no idea who he really is or the world-changing magnitude of his God-given mission. They want to confine him within the bounds of his first family, but Jesus makes it clear that such a hermetically-sealed existence is not any part of his Father's plan for him. When he states that his mother, his brothers and his sisters, are all those who follow his way, he is extending the family beyond its societally acceptable bounds. He is, in effect, creating a new family, a world-wide family, a community of disciples faithful to his teachings.

'A kingdom divided against itself cannot stand.'

Jesus knows that the beginning of wholeness is an acknowledgement of our brokenness, and he is always ready to put the pieces of our lives back together. He is always ready to make us whole, unified, integrated beings, at peace with ourselves, with God and with others.

Jesus, may our care, our love, our tenderness, our forgiveness and generosity, extend way beyond the bounds of our own family unit to include all those in need everywhere. Gift us with the necessary enlargement of our minds and hearts to carry out your teaching and to see our brothers and sisters in all of humanity, especially in the excluded and the marginalised.

Jesus, we know there are divisions in our lives, divisions which fracture the wholeness you desire for us, divisions which often separate us from you, obscuring the glorious light of your presence. Teach us, Jesus, to unify the disparate pieces of our lives on the sacred ground of your love. Give us the courage to own our inner conflicts and divisions, and to trust always in your compassion, in your outstretched hand which is ever ready to hold us firmly and steadily. Amen.
