

A short reflection on today's Gospel

Today's Gospel witnesses another attempt by the Pharisees to trap Jesus out of his own mouth with the question, 'Master, which is the greatest commandment of the Law?' Jesus, with his customary lack of prevarication, goes straight to the heart of the matter with his response, 'You must love your God with all your heart, with all your soul, and with all your mind. This is the greatest and the first commandment. The second resembles it. You must love your neighbour as yourself.'

We know that to love God is to love what God loves, and that means we must love everything: all of creation, all of humanity.

We know that God's love for us flows from His abundant grace: it is pure gift, and not remotely of our deserving. Why do we then assume the temerity to decide who deserves God's love and who does not! We are not worthy of it either. We are well advised to draw from God's abundant love and share it with others, instead of constantly looking for excuses not to love with the abundance of God, not to emulate His overflowing mercy.

Jesus, guide us into loving relationship with your heavenly Father, and through that relationship, may we enter into loving relationship with all other human beings.

Jesus, we can see today the horrific suffering which hatred, love gone sick, causes in the world. Teach us to do what you did on earth: to replace hatred with love and forgiveness, to replace vengeance with prayer and humility. Amen

National Year of Prayer for Vocations to the Diocesan Priesthood – we pray for our seminarians and all those hoping to become priests of the diocese of Derry, that they will keep the commandment of love - love for God and love for neighbour - as the inspiration for everything they say and do.

Feast of All Saints – Wednesday 1st November, a Holyday of Obligation. Masses for the Holyday are as follows:
